Mrs. Iva Cory, Former School Teacher, Dies

Mrs. Iva Cory, widow of A. K. Cory, died Wednesday afternoon at Jacksonville. She had recently resided at the Anna Brown home.

Mrs. Cory, a native of Lima, was for many years a teacher in the public schools of Adams and Hancock counties. Her parents were Dr. B. W. and Letha Tate Forsee. In 1904 she was married to A. K. Cory and they lived for many years in Quincy, where Mr. Cory was associated with the late Peter Pinkelman in the theater business. They built the Washington theater.

The Corys later moved to Chicago, where they were engaged in the hotel business, and for the few years preceding Mr. Cory's death in 1950 they lived at Shelbina, Mo., where they managed a cafe. Mrs. Cory returned to Quincy two years ago to make her home at the Anna Brown home. She was a member of the Christian church at Shelbina.

Surviving Mrs. Cory are three sisters, Mrs. John Workman, Mrs. Louis Randles and Mrs. W. W. Thompson, all of Quincy, and several nieces and nephews. A sister, Mrs. Myrtle Roberts of Marceline, preceded Mrs. Cory in death.

Dear Jack: Now are you Lina and I are visiting Dad & Bob, have been here since the 15th. If our mother connections may stop over and visit you when we go home as we go through Portland.

Don't know if will have any time between towns as we just take time —

We have been to Seattle and Ocean, having a wonderful time. I thought I would let you know we were near. We are planning on staying part of next week here, only to come for work and then home as
